Jamie Marie Nix

(she/her)

Jamie Nix cultivates her passion for storytelling, connecting communities, edible landscapes, and water and soil restoration. She navigates the boundaries between poetry, prose, and creative nonfiction. She writes about the depth of relationships, cross-cultural interactions, and the natural world creating a collage of thoughts, complaints, musings, sketches, overheard conversations, doubts, dreams, delays, expectations, and explorations. Her current work includes organizing the Plants & Poetry Journal which plants a tree or type of vegetation in a Food Forest in Bella Vista, Arkansas. Her goal is to partner with other poets and authors, nonprofits, schools, zines, and journals on literacy, language learning, and agroforestry initiatives.
